DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 6 and 23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. Applicant should clarify what the spacers is "overall electrically insulating between top and bottom."

Regarding claim 23, there is no antecedent basis for "said lane."

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-21 and 28-34 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kim [US 2002/0003519] in view of Levine et al. [US 5,902,165].

Regarding claims 1, 3-6, Kim discloses a back plane [figure 3] comprising an array of electronic elements [paragraph 26] comprising at least a first and second electronic element layers [51, 51a] and at least one separate spacer [101] which rises higher over the back plane [51] than the array [66, 68] and a second spacer layer [103].

Kim disclose the instant claimed invention except for the first and second spacer layer being comprise of substantially the same material as the electronic layers.

Levine et al. disclose a plurality of spacers [125] having the same material as the electronic layers.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the spacer design of Levine et al. with Kim to facilitate manufacture.

Regarding claim 2, Kim discloses the backplane being formed of a semiconductor material [paragraph 26].

Regarding claims 7-8, Kim discloses a plurality of spacers regularly distributed over the backplane [figure 3].

Regarding claims 9-10, Kim discloses the array providing a plurality of addressable locations with each location having a spacer associated therewith [figure 1].

Regarding claims 11-12, Kim disclose the instant claimed invention except for the specific shape of the spacers.

The specific shape of the spacers would have been an obvious design consideration based on the particular backplane configuration.

Regarding claim 13-15, Levine et al. discloses an insulating layer [32] having a general constant thickness extending over at least one layer.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the insulating layer of Levine et al. in Kim for the purpose of protecting the electronic layer.

Regarding claims 16-20 and 32-34, Kim discloses a reflective electrode [74] mounted on the insulating layer.

Regarding claim 21, Kim discloses at least some of the spacers [203] being disposed externally of the array.

Regarding claims 28-31, the claimed method steps are necessitated by the product structure.

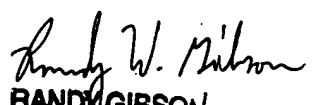

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 22-27 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
